BY WAY OF INTRODUCTION

THE purpose of this volume is twofold. First, it is a convenient, well-indexed reference book for anyone, whether layman or professional, who is interested in printing. To him it offers not only proofreading marks, explanations of the point system, definitions of printing terms, and other helpful information on type and its uses, but also these four features of particular value:

1. A selection of 145 single line specimens of type faces in common use today, alphabetically arranged to make it easy for one to acquaint himself quickly with their individual characteristics or to identify, by comparison, types from other sources.
2. A similar selection of 58 single line specimens of antique and exotic types such as have recently been revived.
3. A number of pages demonstrating the use of selected types in printed matter: also several pages of rules and decorative material.
4. A group of 80 pages showing 90 complete alphabets (with numerals) of types now popular, most of the alphabets being repeated in several sizes, giving a total of 388 separate alphabets.

Secondly, for the man who makes layouts for printing, or who does hand-lettering (or who is learning to do these things), this book is a veritable storehouse of inspiring and easily adapted reference material, not to mention its brief but nevertheless vital text which demonstrates, among other things, how to use the reference material to advantage. For example, it selects a typical alphabet and shows how the letterer would adapt it to his hand-done work: again, it presents a typical layout and beside it a finished piece of printed matter—an advertisement—based upon it, the whole accompanied by full description of the procedure.

In short, whether one is novice or adept—whether he is interested in lettering, in layout, or merely in gaining a greater knowledge of type faces—we believe he will find this book most helpful. It is especially recommended for use in schools in connection with courses in lettering, advertising design, printing, sign painting, etc. Students can turn to its pages with the assurance that they represent the highest professional standards.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT

THE author expresses his deep appreciation to all who have cooperated in the preparation of this volume. Especially is credit due to the following firms and individuals for their generous assistance: The Composing Room, Inc., The Bauer Type Foundry, Inc., Rumford Press, Frederic Nelson Phillips, Inc., The International Paper Company, Gideon Haynes, Underwood and Underwood, General Electric Company, Chicago Advertising Year Book.

TYPE ★ PAST AND PRESENT

TYPOGRAPHY is one of the youngest of the civilized arts, even though the Chinese were making rubbings from letters cut on wood blocks as early as 900 A.D. Gutenberg is generally conceded to be the inventor of movable type. His, the first complete book from movable type, was printed about 1450.

The design of early type faces was based on manuscript writing. These letters were the natural result of the square-pointed pen used by the scribes. Evolution and the talents of Jenson, Caslon, Garamond, Bodoni, and other great designers gave us the upper and lower case types in common use today. The first printing in the Western Hemisphere was done by Giovanni Paoli in Mexico City in 1539. The Rev. Jesse Glover left England with a printing outfit but died before reaching America. In 1638 his equipment was set up by Stephen Day and his son in Cambridge, Mass. In the short half century after Gutenberg's contribution, sixteen thousand editions were published in Europe. Before that time books were laboriously lettered by hand. They were generally the property of the church and the rich.

Obviously, printing has been a great force in civilization. It has made possible the public library, books, magazines and newspapers. Printing is the voice of advertising.

Recent years have witnessed a renaissance in type design. Modern advertising and book printing, improved printing processes and a renewed interest on the part of the public and designers have resulted in many new and interesting type faces.

Type's major purpose is to be read; therefore it must be legible as individual letters and as blocks of printing. Simplicity and good taste are characteristic of all good type faces. Discrimination is necessary in the selection and use of a type for a particular purpose. Type faces are highly individual. They give character to the printed page. Type may be delicate or brutal, refined or baudy, conservative or aggressive. The manner of speech of an individual makes an instant impression on the listener: type has the same effect on the eye and the mind of the reader. Here indeed is a subtle and powerful tool in the hands of the designer and the advertiser. Daily, alphabets in their many forms affect the lives and the actions of countless human beings.

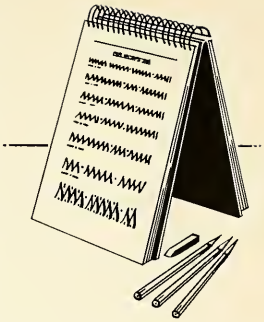
HOW TO USE THIS BOOK



SPIRAL binding was adopted for this volume for functional reasons. It enables the book to be utilized like an easel as in the sketch at the right—a thing of double value, for, in this vertical position, the book not only occupies little room on the desk or drawing board, but permits the spectator to see the pages in an unforeshortened position. This is of particular advantage when the letterer or layout man desires to refer to a single page for a considerable period.

Full as this book is of type faces, it contains only a modest percentage of the many hundreds which are available. Each type face is also normally manufactured in many sizes. While we here offer a generous assortment of sizes in certain standard alphabets such as Caslon and Bodoni, we have in some other cases limited ourselves mainly to the smaller sizes which are most in demand in printing, and to extremely large sizes helpful to the letterer. Newer and less known faces like Trafton and Tempo have not been overlooked, but extreme styles which are in questionable taste have purposely been omitted.

A TYPE SCRAP BOOK

STUDENTS often find it advantageous to supplement such a book as this by organizing scrap books, usually of loose leaf form, of supplementary material collected from books, magazines and other printed matter, and including both individual type faces and attractive examples of their application to printing.

OUR BOOK AS A LETTERER'S GUIDE

JUST as many type faces were originally based on hand-lettering, so the letterer often draws inspiration from type faces. Especially where hand-lettering and type are to be used together (as in advertisements and other forms of printed matter in which individualized headings, captions and other important copy is often hand-lettered) they have much in common: there must be perfect harmony between the two. Therefore a type book such as this, with its many beautiful type faces, can prove, within reasonable limits, an excellent guide for the letterer, helping him in his lettering while acquainting him intimately with types. On the next page we shall discuss a method which enables the letterer to translate type faces into lettering.

HOW TO LETTER FROM TYPE

TO UTILIZE type faces like those in this volume as a basis for hand-lettering, some logical method must be followed. Here is a common one. For purposes of study we have selected one of the finest standard type faces, Caslon 540.

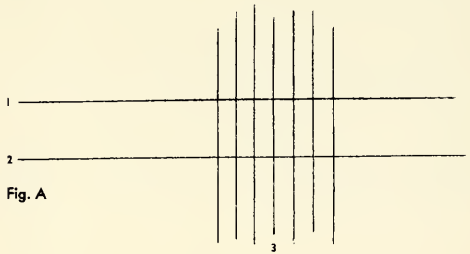


Fig. A

PROCEDURE

Thumbtack a sheet of tracing paper to the drawing board. With the T-square, draw two horizontal guide lines three-quarters of an inch or so apart. See 1 and 2, Fig. A.

Next, with T-square and triangle draw a number of closely spaced vertical lines: Fig. A, 3. These will serve as guides for letter ascenders and descenders.

Tack a second sheet of tracing paper over the guide line sheet and lightly sketch the word millpond, using the specimen sheet of Caslon 540 as a model. Don't make the common beginner's mistake, pictured in Fig. B, of getting a crowded effect in some places. Note at 4, for example, that the vertical letters m i l l are too closely spaced as compared with the round letters p o n d (5), resulting in an irregular tone over the whole. The test of good spacing is the evenness of tone (color) over a word, line, or paragraph. Incidentally, good spacing (and particularly open spacing) adds as much to legibility as to appearance, as will be noted in Fig. C.

Your first rough sketch is only a trial. It is never advisable to correct poor spacing by changing the proportions of letters. Lay another sheet of tissue over the two already in place and draw in the letters p o n d, keeping the white spaces in and between the letters approximately alike. See 6, Fig. C. Shift this tracing until the l next to p spaces correctly. Repeat this practice with the first three letters of the word, m i l (Fig. C, 7), and the result should be as uniform as in our example. By using tracing paper in this manner, shifting it as necessary for study of spacing, time can be saved and best results obtained.

As it is seldom advisable to try to da finished lettering on tracing paper, the perfected pencil drawing is lightly transferred to some firmer surface such os bristol baard. This can be dane by coating the back of the paper with graphite, applied with o soft pencil (used flatwise), next lining the farms thraugh fram the face with a sharp pencil. The transferred farms are then perfected in pencil, after which they are inked in. Inking is generally done with pen or brush and waterproof drawing ink, as in Fig. C. This completes the custamary procedure.

A study of the variaus alphobets in this valume will make clear that lettering based upon them wauld nat always demand exactly the same treatment. For instance, a style like Futura Light (page 75) can often be interpreted satisfactorily with single strokes of the pen. On the other hand, a type like Hauser Script (page 100) requires a quick, bold handling of the brush. In all lettering, perfection comes only through careful observation coupled with constant practice. By working from variaus alphabets in this book, using pen or brush as each style demands, sound progress should be made.

The experienced letterer often interprets a style af lettering rather freely, making whatever changes his mood or purpose dictates. Normolly, however, he at least maintoins the established and beautiful relative proportions of his prototype: if he diverges from them he does so consistently.

SPACE TO OBTAIN EVEN TONE

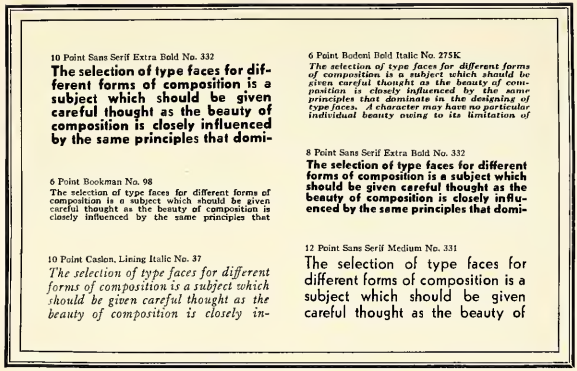
AND NOW COMES LAYOUT

BOTH the mon qualified ta do hand-lettering and the one who designs printed matter (but does not letter) need knawledge of loyout. But what is loyaut? A loyaut is the sketch in which the designer records his conception of an advertisement ar other piece of printed matter. It is generally drawn actual size, in pencil, on a large tissue pad. As in the case of the word millpond just discussed, the texture of the paper and its transparency moke it possible to produce ane study over another. Type and illustration can be traced into the layout. Layout pencils, similar ta lithographic pencils, give the uniform grays and rich blacks so necessory in a good page.

The layout shows the placing of all elements af the advertisement, indicating their relotive size ond impartance. The layout man seldom writes the odvertisement—o copy writer normally supplies the theme and reading matter—but he does, as a rule, determine the general style af an advertisement and he orranges the illustratians ond type matter.

INDICATING TYPE

IN SUCH wark, headings—large wards af display—are raughly blocked out in reodoble farm with strokes suggestive of the type to be used. Blocks of smaller type are merely indicated by massed horizontal lines af such weight and spacing as to simulate the effect desired. All this is exemplified by the accompanying illustrotion. That different sizes and weights af type creote different tone (color) values when set in blacks of copy is shown at the top af the following page. See how light in tone some af these areas are when compared with others. Examine publications far further examples of tone created by type. Such tone is an important factor in printing. In a layout, the relative grays of type matter and illustrotions, as indicated by the loyaut man, creote pattern.



COPY BLOCKS SET IN DIFFERENT TYPES

The blocks of copy above give an ideo of the legibility, tone, ond number of characters per line of vorious type sizes.

TYPE MEASURING SYSTEM

TYPE is measured by what is known os the point system. This is based on the division of the inch into 72 equal parts or points.*

6 points = 1 nonpareil
12 points = 2 nonpareils = 1 pica
6 picas = 1 inch
72 points = 1 inch

 This statement and the table are slightly inaccurate as the pica actually measures 0.16608 of an inch, six picas measuring 0.99648 of an inch and a point about 0.0138 of an inch.*

All material used by the typographer such as type, borders, rules, ornaments, leads, etc., is measured by the point system ond shauld be so specified. Printers use in place af our regular foot rule what is known as the printer's rule, which is normally graduoted in picas and nonpareils. In other words, the printer would call a column of type which measures two inches in width "twelve picas wide," or, more often, "twelve pica measure."

Note: While the rules at the bottom of page 14 give a graphic indication of the increase in size of type by points, the actual face of type—the part which comes in contact with the paper and gives the visible impression—varies in size in types of different design. For example, compare the 6-point faces in the copy blocks above. In other words, all type of a certain designated size is not necessarily the same in actual size. Usually type faces are considerably smaller than rules of the same designation because few faces completely fill the type body—a matter exemplified by the illustration on page 15.

PRINTING TERMS DEFINED

THE art and science of printing being extremely complicated, a whole volume could easily be devoted to almost any phase of it. When it comes to terminology, for instance, printers have practically a language of their own. Fortunately one can find adequate definitions of most printing terms in the dictionary. Here are a few in common use.

AGATE—5½-point type.
ALTERATIONS—Changes from original copy, or authar's carrections. The printer's bugaboa.
A-P-L—All Purpase Linotype. Machine used mainly for the casting of big type. Nat dissimilar in principle fram the Ludlow.
ASCENDERS—The parts af lower-case letters that project obave the waist or main line, e.g., h, d, f, etc.
BLACK-FACE LETTER—Dark or bald form of German text; alsa called Gothic.
BLEED—A picture that has been trimmed ta permit it ta extend ta the extreme edges of the page.
BODY—Size fram top ta bottam af type.
BODY-TYPE—Type used for the main body af a jab, usually 14-point or less.
BOLD FACE—The dark form of a type family as against its light and medium forms.
BROCHURE—A pamphlet bound and stitched in baak form.
BUILT-UP LETTER—Letter first drawn in autline and then filled in.
CHASE—The metal frame in which type and plates are locked up for printing.
COMPOSING STICK—Metal tray graduated ta the paint system and used ta set type ta a given measure.
COMPOSITOR—One who compases ar sets type.
CONDENSED TYPE—A narraw type face.
COPPER SPACES—½-point spaces.
CURSIVES—Joined letters with rounded angles—like uncial letters.
CYLINDER PRESS—Machine that prints by the actian af a cylinder an a flat form.
DESCENDERS—Parts of the lower-case letters that descend below the main or waist line, e.g., g, j, p.
DEVIL—Usually youngest helper in a print shop.
DISPLAY TYPE—Large type used far emphasis.
DOUBLE TRUCK—Term designating a bady of copy and illustration that spreads across two facing pages of a publication.
EM—The square of the bady of any size type; 10 paints wide far 10-point type, etc.
EN—One-half the width of an em.
EXPANDED TYPE—Oppasite of candensed type.
FACE—The tap part of a type piece that gives it its style and distinctian.
FAMILY—Type faces that make a related graup.
FONT—Full assartment of type of ane size and face, e.g., 12-point Gaudy, etc.
FORM—Type and material locked in a chase and ready far the press.
FOUNDRY—The electratype faundry, where electratype plates are made by casting from the original farm cansisting af type and cuts. Alsa refers ta faundry type, ar individual hand type.
FURNITURE—Wood or metal forms less than type-high used ta fill large blank spaces in chase not occupied by printing matter.
GALLEY—Shallow tray used to assemble ar stare away type and plates.
GALLEY PRESS—Machine for making proofs.
GALLEY PROOF—Praaf af type matter that is still in the galley and so is easily carrected.
GEOMETRICS—Expression far decorative figures or pictarial compasitions made with geametric ar type forms.
GOTHIC—Uniform-strake letters or type withaut serifs: alsa SANS SERIF.
GRIPPERS—Metal prongs an a platen press that hald the sheets ta the platen.
GROOVE—The space between the feet of a type.
GUIDE—Pieces of metal an the tympan againat which paper is fed in printing.
HAIR SPACES—Thinnest strips used in spacing aut type.
HAIRLINE—Thin rule in printing.
HAND PRESS—Vertical moving press manipuloted by hand far abtaining impressions, e.g., Washington Press.
HEADINGS—Heodlines as distinguished fram body type.
IMPOSITION—Lackup of page forms in a chase.
INTERTYPE—Typesetting machine exactly the same in principle and performonce as Linotype.
ITALICS—Script-like letters or type.
JUSTIFICATION—The process af spacing out type ta a given measure that lines may be uniform in length.
KERN—That part af a type that is prolonged beyond the body.
LEADERS—Datted line used ta lead the reader's eye from word to ward in tabular matter.
LEADING—Insertion af metal strips of required width between lines of type.
LEADS—Strips af metal far separating type lines.
LIGATURE—Twa or three characters combined an a single type body, e.g., ff, œ, ffi, ffl, etc.
LIGHT FACE—Lightest and thinnest form of a type series; opposite of bald-face.
LINOTYPE—Line of type set by a machine manipulated in typewriter fashian; alsa name af machine.
LIVE TYPE—Printing matter still in use.
LOCKUP—Type matter and plates lacked together in a frame preparatory to printing.

PRINTING TERMS CONTINUED

LOWER CASE—Small letters usually found in the lower part of the type case.

LUDLOW TYPOGRAPHY—Slug-casting machine in which matrices are hand set.

MACHINE COMPOSITION—Type set by machine, not by hand.

MAKE-READY—Preparation of type, press, and plate forms with overlay or underlay to obtain uniform impression.

MAKE UP—Adjustment of types and cuts into a form.

MEASURE—Width of a column of set type.

MISPRINT—Typographical error.

MONOTYPE—A method of casting individual types from matrices. The Monotype process is divided into two mechanical units, the keyboard, or composing unit and the casting unit. At the keyboard, holes are punched in a roll of paper which, ployer piano fashion, acts as the monitor when placed in the casting unit.

NICK—Shallow slit in a type which helps the compositor to avoid mixing similar types.

NONPAREIL—A unit of measure—one-half of a pica—6 points.

OFFSET PRINTING—Impression on a rubber blanket made by a plate and then offset on paper.

OLD ENGLISH—Heavy black-faced letters.

OLD-STYLE TYPE—Thick-and-thin-stroked letters with wedge-shaped serifs which are especially marked in the lower cases.

OPEN MATTER—Widely spaced type lines.

OVERLAY—Make-ready; addition of layers of tissue under tympan on press to even the impression.

PI—Dropped or mixed type.

PICA—Printer's unit of measure; 12 points (approximately 12/72 of an inch).

COPYREADING MARKS

Symbols for editing copy.

Correct editing reduces average costly alteration charges by more than half, and alterations account for from 10 to 50 per cent of most jobs

ONE WORD	If our only yard stick of business profits is dollars, and we measure our every activity by the noise it makes on the cash register, then I say, don't join anything. Keep out of your trade associations fight shy of the local service clubs; have nothing to do with executives organized on functional lines. In the first place, with such a philosophy you probably won't put much into these associations and you may be perfectly certain you won't take much out.

PROOFREADING MARKS

Symbols for correcting copy after it has been set in type, not to be confused with copyreading marks. Good proofreading checks the finished composition for three factors: Sense, typographical errors and the faithful following of copy

- Dele, or delete: take out.
- Letter reversed — turn.
- Put in space.
- Close up — no space.
- Bad spacing; space more evenly.
- Wrong font: character of wrong size or style.
- Transpose.
- Make a new paragraph.
- Indent; or, put in an em-quad space.
- Carry to the left.
- Carry to the right.
- Elevate.
- Depress.
- Imperfect type — correct.
- Space shows between words — push down.
- Straighten alignment.
- Restore or ~~retain~~ words crossed out.
- Print (æ, fi, etc.) as a ligature.
- out, see copy — Words are omitted from, or in, copy
- Query to author: Is this correct?
- caps — Put in capitals.
- sc — Put in SMALL CAPITALS.
- lc — Put in LOWER CASE.
- rom — Put in roman type.
- ital — Put in italic type.
- bf — Put in bold face type.
- Insert period.
- Insert an apostrophe in proof readers marks.
- Insert hyphen in printing office efficiency.
- en — Insert en dash between 1918 20.
- em — Insert em dash.

HENNESSY
☆☆☆ Cognac Brandy

Life rolls along today in the Cognac region of France much as it did one hundred and seventy years ago. Today, as then, accepted vinegrowers trundle their choice "crus" to the Hennessy warehouses, where they are skillfully blended and stored to await the magic mellowing of time. And today, as then, the bouquet and "clean" taste of Hennessy make it the preferred liqueur everywhere . . . Distilled and bottled at Cognac, France.

new mexico

New Mexican pueblo villages are of interest to scientist and tourist alike. The golden age of pueblo construction began in 900 A. D. and flourished for 300 years. Ruins of these community dwellings, often containing as many as 1,200 rooms, may be seen today.

new mexico

Some examples of pueblo architecture are still standing and in daily use by the Indians at Taos and other pueblos. The Pueblo Indians evolved a drama, a religion and a system of government so advanced that they were called savages only because they had not developed a written language. They still hold strange dances and ceremonials, prayers for rain and thanks for crops, weird rites which attract the curious from all over the world. The Aztec National Monument contains an interesting cluster of pre-historic ruins.

Eye View of the Mode

A time honoured theory, expounded by our grandmothers as well as our contemporaries, is that fashion moves in a cycle. One old wives' version insists that every type of costume turns up once in seven years, and many an old attic has held trunks overflowing with gowns hopefully awaiting this reincarnation. Needless to say, these dresses, however lovely, have reappeared

NINETY COMPLETE ALPHABETS (SELECTED)

The numerous type faces which follow are all popular today. Some of them were recently designed: others have long been favorites. Most of them are available in many more sizes than we have shown. It will be noted that many types which seem almost identical bear different names. This is usually because they are the product of different manufacturers.
